

Submit Your Proposal

Praeger welcomes your manuscript and book proposal submissions. We seek serious general-interest books in psychology, education, health, politics, current events, history, military and security issues, popular culture, business, crime, and religion. We publish single-volume titles in these areas for academic and public libraries as well as for individuals buying online. We also seek editors for multivolume sets in these subject areas, primarily for the library markets. Note: We do not publish fiction, poetry, or memoirs.

If you have a book project that you think would be suitable for our publishing program, we want to hear from you. Please submit a proposal consisting of the following:

- Keynote. In one or two sentences, describe the scope, rationale and purpose, and direction that the work will take and explain why the work fills a significant information gap in library collections.
- Summary. In a paragraph or two, summarize your argument and how it contributes to an ongoing discussion, proposes particular solutions, provides answers to pressing questions, or solves difficult issues. You should address the question of the timeliness of your work as well.
- Organization/outline. Prepare an annotated table of contents that clearly shows the development of your argument or story.
- Length. Estimate the total number of words for the final manuscript.
- Potential Audience. Put yourself in the reader's position. Who needs the information in your work, and for what reasons? What assignments or research might your work be used for? What problems might your work help readers to solve?
- Competition. If there are any other recent works (published in the last five years) on the same topic, list them. Include author, title, publisher, date of publication, number of pages, and price. Comment on how your work is different from or supersedes the competitive title.
- Biographical Information. Include a paragraph on your credentials as well as your c.v., making it clear why you are the right person to write this book or edit this set at this time.
- Publicity. Provide a short discussion of how you can help market and promote your book beyond the library or academic market.

Finally, please let us know if this is a simultaneous submission (i.e., if you're sending the proposal to more than one publisher at the same time). Once we have considered your initial proposal, we may ask you to submit additional material (such as sample chapters) for review. Note: our sample proposal template may help you prepare your materials. See Praeger Proposal Memo

Praeger editors work in one or more subject areas. Please forward your proposal to the appropriate Praeger editor. We look forward to hearing from you!
