

Get Students Started with ABC-CLIO's Online Research Lists

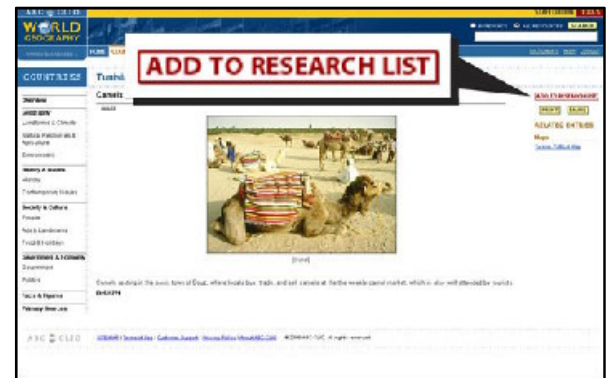

Suppose your students are researching the philosophical ideas that influenced the Declaration of Independence or the circumstances that fueled the rise of fascism in Europe in the early 1930s.

In just a few steps, you can quickly assemble links to credible articles and primary sources that your students can easily access by clicking the Research List button on the home page of the database.

How can you use the Research List?

A Research List is a useful tool for:

- Giving students reliable resources to start a research project
- Planning lessons
- Assembling resources for class presentations
- Assigning homework
- Providing additional resources beyond those in a textbook
- Supplying all students with access to the same materials at the same time
- Collecting primary source materials for exams or exam practice

Let's Get Started!

To create a custom Research List:

- Log on to the ABC-CLIO online database using the Staff Edition username and password you get from your librarian or by calling 1-800-368-6868
- Start your Research List by simply going to any reference resource page and clicking on the "Add To Research List" button
- Give your list a name so that you or your students can easily identify it
- Select the Save and Post button if you want your current list to be posted immediately for student access or click Save for Later if it's for your personal use or if you want to do further editing
- You can add Notes to give students instructions or remind them of the goals of the assignment
- At any time you can add, delete, or change the order of the items in your list

That's all there is to it! Now you can add more resources, edit your list, print your list, or create additional research lists. Once you have saved a Research List, it will always be available until you choose to delete it

Student Access:

After you've posted a list, your students simply click the Research Lists button in the Student Access version of the database's home page and then click on the name of the assigned list.
