Bridget Crossman: You could also check out Epic Reads for bookmojis, while you wait for bookelicious.

Melissa Thom: For all of you out there who have been doing things to keep reading social, we would LOVE to hear about it! I set up a Flipgrid for SLC and there are 3 topics currently: introduce yourself, Book Access, and Social Reading. Feel free to contribute to any or all of them!! <https://flipgrid.com/slcreading>

School Library Connection: School Library Connection has a great Educator Guide for Stamped, written by Julia Torres

Melissa Thom: A couple places I find really great book deals is through the Scholastic Book Club flyers, <http://bookoutlet.com> and <http://bookdepot.com>. Bookoutlet is more for public and orders $35 or over have free shipping. Book Depot is for larger quantity orders with a min of $100 + shipping. I used Book Depot last spring to make a large order for summer reading books and the leftovers have been used for free book friday!

Michelle: Whenever I want to highlight a Nic Stone book, I play her introduction/booktalk. Students just zoom in on her energy and passion immediately.

Melissa Thom: def watch Twitter for Author updates...I had Jennifer Nielsen and Lindsay Currie this fall for free because they posted that they were offering free visits!

Ali Schilpp: #AuthorFanFaceOff EVERY Monday @ 7am EST

Terri: These Fan Face-Offs would be great to use as our Book Talks!

Melissa Thom: <http://teachingbooks.net> is another really cool resource to help find book related material!
